

From a measured signal to a reported biochemical result

The protocol specifies what is done; the models specify how the result is inferred.

Three checks probe progressively more of the measurement chain greater variation in laboratory, method, and assumptions → stronger invariance claim